

Leadership renewal for a regenerative society...

where people, institutions, communities, and environments not only sustain but also restore, renew, and reinforce one another.

The Center for Regenerative Society provides leadership renewal programs for people and institutions playing an important role in shaping a healthy, just and sustainable society.

We believe that a regenerative society is an outward reflection of an inner condition – that means it truly begins within us. Many of the leaders around us already have excellent leadership skills. They have demonstrated commitment to our culture's most difficult issues and their contributions are urgent and essential. But they face incredibly challenging work and are given few resources with which to accomplish it. Leaders capable of living and leading from within are healthier, more effective, and can avoid burnout while working under difficult circumstances.

Our innovative approach to leadership renewal aids in retaining and sustaining critical community resources in our service territory: people who are working on the frontlines of social change, increasing access to healthy food, good health care, quality schools, good jobs, good housing, and safe and healthy environments for children, families and communities.

Driftless Region

Our primary service territory is the Driftless Region (the roughly 16,000 square mile unglaciated region around the juncture of Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Illinois) and the ring of metropolitan areas around it in each of those four states.